

INTRODUCTION

To take control and to master the use of time, is what this course will help you to do. Time management benefits from analysis and planning. But the main ingredient is you, and your commitment to the effort of changing old habits. Not only understanding the principles of time management, you must also learn how you use time and to overcome the problems you encounter in using it wisely. Time management is a cognitive process that must fit your style and circumstances.

This unique program takes you through the essentials of time management and introduces the techniques to understand how you presently use time and how to change that to a more effective and efficient use with all the positive benefits that will include. Each of us knows that we waste time, but here you will learn to pinpoint that time and redirect it. You will also learn long-range and short-range planning aids and the best ways to use devices to help you. There is also an action section and case scenarios that helps you to apply what you have learned and to plan for further improvement.
