Driving HR Transformation

11th November 2021,
Thursday,
3pm to 4pm

Complimentary.

*Limited slots available.
Registration is required.*

The Human Resources function has played a pivotal role in organizational success. As companies continue to grapple with global public health, socio-political uncertainties and rapid technological changes, the HR role needs to focus on engaging, reskilling their employees and creating new employee experiences. Reinventing HR is in essence critical in helping you transform your organization. Guiding principles of personalization, data-driven decision-making, agility and transparency are at the core of this transformation journey.

In this webinar, Andre and Lee Hong from IBM will discuss what HR Transformation is about, particularly focusing on talent and learning transformation and why these are essential in current times.

Key Learning Points

By the end of the session, you will gain insights into:

- Key Principles in HR 3.0
- Talent Transformation
- Learning for the Future
- Driving HR Transformation through Workday
- Case Study

About the Speakers

Andre Renne is IBM's Workday Delivery Leader across Asia Pacific and currently based out of Taiwan. He is an accomplished HR and Finance technology practitioner and a Workday pioneer, with successful digital transformation projects spanning globally and across various industries.

In his current role, he works closely with the broader Talent Transformation group and the Solution Innovation Hub in providing advisory and optimal solutions on Workday projects globally.

Lee Hong Tan is currently the Talent Transformation Leader at IBM and brings long over 20 years of HR experience. She has led teams in large HRIS system transformation projects for clients in various industries as well as complex employee transitions such as part of strategic IT outsourcing or global M&A transactions.

Prior to her current role, she has been supporting the HR transformation of IBM's consulting business unit, driving organizational changes and program management.
