

Deep Value Investing: The Capital Cycle Approach

Capital Cycle in the Singapore property market

27 October 2020,
Tuesday,
3pm to 4pm.

Complimentary.

*Limited slots available,
prior registration is required.*

The recent emergence of second and third waves of COVID-19 will continue to impact economies around the world in the foreseeable future. Moreover, escalation in trade tensions between America and China will pose downside risks and more uncertainties ahead.

What exactly does this mean for both retail and corporate investors? Against the backdrop of muted market sentiments, it will be difficult to ascertain the sustainability of a company or business.

How can investors identify which investment is worthy enough to dive into? Is deep value investing a good strategy in times of uncertainties? What is a Business Cycle and how can it affect your investment decisions?

Join us for a 1-hour webinar where experienced investment fund portfolio manager Goh Tee Leng will share with you insights to the Capital Cycle Approach in deep value investing and in-depth analysis of the Capital Cycle in the Singapore Property Market.

About the Speaker

Goh Tee Leng is the Portfolio Manager of Heritage Global Capital Fund, having over five years of experience in the financial markets. He also holds a directorial position at Tat Hwa Group, a privately-held, investment holding and management company that serves as the foundation of the Group's umbrella of companies and subsidiaries. Additionally, he is a frequent speaker at investment conferences and his investment-related articles have been published internationally. He also holds a BSc (Hons.) Economics degree from University College London.
