

Creative Communication: Prepare Like an Actor

4 February 2021

Thursday

3pm to 4pm.

Complimentary.

*Limited slots available.
Prior registration is required.*

This webinar is a primer on creative communication, teaching you how to apply three acting tools to enhance your impromptu speaking and presentation skills.

While most of us don't see ourselves as actors, we unconsciously switch between a wide range of different roles every day of our lives, both at home and at work. When we switch roles, we often change how we speak in different settings, from meeting a potential client for the first time to delivering a formal presentation for senior management.

The key is to consciously craft your performance, allowing you to play the best version of yourself, no matter who you are talking to.

Join us for a 1-hour webinar where you will learn how to consciously craft vocal delivery and non-verbal communication, develop a "rehearsal culture" within your workplace, successfully adapt formal or informal presentations to engage different audiences, use insights and stories to gain audience empathy and attention and styling yourself to represent the values of your company.

Key Learning Points

1. Projecting fluent physical and virtual delivery that displays confidence and expressiveness
2. Successfully adapting messages for varied audiences and quickly evolving situations
3. Organizing active rehearsals of presentations within the workplace
4. Incorporating personal stories into conversations, presentations or speeches, ensuring they connect meaningfully with your main ideas
5. Altering your style to make the best impression on different audiences
